When Does NEIF Need a Personal Guarantee?

Generally, commercial finance is based only on an evaluation of business credit. In some cases, NEIF will require a personal guarantee (PG). A PG is a very common feature of commercial equipment financing. We have found that it is commonly the added factor that makes a business finance request earn an approval — when the business credit itself isn't sufficient.

A PG will always be required if the borrower is either:

- Sole proprietorship or single member LLC, and /or
- Time in business <= 2 years

Upon initial credit review, a PG may be requested to bolster creditworthiness.

A Cross Corporate Guarantee (CCG) of a similarly owned business may be considered in place of a PG (case by case). See next page for more information.

What is a Personal Guarantee, and Why Might NEIF Ask For It?

When you sign a personal guarantee (PG), it means that you are personally standing behind your business' financial obligation. Here are a few things to know:

- A personal guarantee DOES NOT involve a loan. It stands behind a loan and only comes into play if the loan defaults (i.e. your business defaults). It does not show up in a credit report and it does not require that you make any payments — unless your business defaults.
- A personal guarantee DOES involve a personal credit pull.
 - The credit inquiry will show up on your credit report. In and of itself — that is not a negative factor, but if you have many instances of different creditors pulling your credit, it can eventually affect your credit.
 - If you have a recent personal bankruptcy or if your personal credit is not good, then the PG may not be enough to get your business' loan request approved.

NEIF will never pull your personal credit or initiate a PG without your permission. The first step is that you sign our Personal Guarantee Request Form. Then — and only then — we will pull your personal credit. If the PG is approved, then you will sign that personal guarantee form when you sign your business financing documents.

What is a Cross Corporate Guarantee, and Why Might NEIF Ask For It?

A Cross Corporate Guarantee (CCG) means that another related business that you own is standing behind the finance you've requested. Like a PG, it is common to use a CCG to support a financing request for a small, new, or not-so-profitable business. A CCG and a PG are interchangeable and serve the same purpose as one another. Like a PG, a CCG is sometimes the factor that helps move a finance request to approval.

Here are a few things to know about a CCG:

- A CCG is NOT a loan. It stands behind a loan and only comes into play if the loan defaults (e.g. your business defaults). It does not require that you make any payments — unless the business that you are financing defaults. It also does not require that the business providing the CCG make any payments unless the business seeking the new financing defaults.
- A CCG DOES NOT involve personal credit or a personal credit pull.
- A CCG is only as good as the credit of the business offering the guarantee; it works in many, but not all cases.

NEIF will never consider a CCG and review the associated credit of your other businesses without your permission. The first step is that you agree to have us look at your other, related business' credit quality. We will need the legal name, corporate address, and EIN of the other business. Depending on the size of the request, we may request the corporate guarantor's financials. If the CCG is approved, then you (and any other key owners of the CCG company) will sign for the CCG when you sign your business financing documents.
